Background / Description: In 2005, the City of Coral Springs implemented Chapter 14, which is an ordinance regulating the residency of Sexual Offender and Sexual Predators. This ordinance was established as an attempt to provide clear guidance and restrict the ability of such individuals to relocate within the jurisdictional boundaries of Coral Springs.

Since its adoption, the ordinance has not been revised, and over time, some of its language has become unclear, leading to varying interpretations. This ambiguity poses a risk, as consistent and precise enforcement is critical. Over the past year, we have seen a noticeable increase in inquiries and relocation attempts by registered sex offenders from other cities, many of which directly reference or challenge the existing ordinance. We believe some changes need to be made to ensure legal clarity and strengthen consistency in enforcement. Our Coral Springs Police SVU detectives conducted extensive research, including a review of similar ordinances from multiple jurisdictions. Based on their findings, they have proposed updated language aimed at eliminating confusion and reinforcing the ordinance's intent.
